The Porta-Able Heroes Present

Project: Mashup

The show is a mere hour long, in which time, 15 performers will get exactly 4 minutes each to perform. There is also a competitive aspect to the show, with each performer striving to win the coveted People's Choice Vote. The standout performer of the night will receive a prize of $150.

"But theatre sucks..."

But this is only called theatre because it is set on a stage... in a bar (where you can drink, and eat, and be merry).

"It's a tuesday night, I'm a uni student, I'll be at The Hawthorn..."

The venue is at The Workers Club, which will be open all night, so drinks can be had before/during/after the show. Also, it's Brunswick Street, get some culture in you.

"But theatre is all the same..."

Wrong, the performances in the show can literally be anything (singing, dancing, acoustic guitar, monologue, acting, painting, mime, film, interpretive dance, a rapid fire debate, a sketch, a political statement, naked pantomime, stand up comedy, silent show, banjo, xylophone, tap dance, just a microphone and 200 people to vent to. Anything goes.
